What data are processed, and why?

Each year, the College welcomes a few students from other universities and colleges around the world as Visiting Students, offering them accommodation, usually for periods of up to six months. These visitors must be pursuing an academic purpose at the University of Cambridge, and are sponsored by a Fellow of the College. However, they are not admitted to membership of the College. Collected on the legal basis of 'legitimate interests', in order to provide a suitably warm welcome to the academic visitor, and to observe any duty of care towards them, the information processed in the College consists of name, postal address, email and other contact details, CV, College accommodation, home university and the specific course followed there, the sponsor's name and contact details, and references. We also process related correspondence from the student, university staff, and sponsors.

Where does the data come from?

The personal data are supplied by the data subject, sponsors and referees.
